And now a commercial break!

St. Helena Elementary

The students would rather go to work on the farm rather than go to class. They shared stories of how they helped their parents cook the vegetables they took home from the farm and how they worked an area in their backyards to plant the seeds they received from the farm.

Welcome Elementary

Students have already commented on the beautiful plants and the birds that have already found our new feeding stations. Teachers are excited about the impact the garden will have on their science lessons.

Joe Adair Outdoor Education Center

I truly feel that this project will have a lasting effect on students and the community. Since we have replacement supplies for the upcoming school year, students can continue to test water quality and compare the results from next year to this year to determine changes that have occurred in the water. This will allow students to hypothesize what might be happening to cause the differences in the data.
